QUT Seminar Series

Interested in understanding the power of university-community partnerships in research and teaching?

Want to know what university study and research are like in Australia?

QUT's Seminar will give you an insight into the education and research advantages of QUT's 'living laboratory' connections with industry, government and community organisations. It will show you how QUT assists graduates to achieve high impact careers in diverse professions and in research.

The seminar will be presented by a delegation of senior QUT academics and has been specially designed for:

- ➔ members of the general public and the academic community interested in the development of education; and
- ➔ students who want to know more about studying at QUT or an Australian university.

Following a presentation by delegation leader Professor Rod Wissler, QUT's Dean of Graduate Studies, a panel of distinguished faculty members will provide additional perspectives and respond to questions.

QUT is the largest provider of Australian Bachelor degree graduates into the full time workforce and is a leading research provider to Australian and multinational companies. QUT's PhD graduates are leading innovation in a diverse range of industries.

When QUT graduates return home to their country they can be confident that they will have the required skills to suit the demands of their chosen profession.
